TechLeadership.ORG is definitely a Microsoft Company trying to gain the support of people who have no clue what-so-ever about the actual issues with MS vs. US. While I do agree to some degree with limiting the control of the gov t when it comes to the internet and advancement in technology. This issue that the gov t is pushing and trying to resolve is a valid pursuit. I remember the many stupid e-mails I received from Microsoft. Microsoft Propaganda that told lies about its actual capabilities. Much like this techleadership postcard I got and the phone call that followed suit. Brainwashing people who haven t a clue that the gov t is wasting tax payer money when this was all a calculated risk by Microsoft. So who was really responsible for wasting tax payer money? While I admit MS has a right to grow its business to the limits but what they are doing is anti competitive and will stagger and has staggered the growth of technology. MS has not had made any advancement in the OS industry. DOS which is a product they never made is still the most stable OS they ever sold. MS - masters in marketing. Nothing else . GO U.S.A.!!! Go U.S.A.!!!
